Aruba Hails First Queen's Visit

Queen Unveils Mother's Statue; Tours Island

The "Wilhelmus" broke through the multitudes' cheering as a smiling lady in a summery rose-print dress, her white-gloved hand carrying a dainty white parasol, stepped lightly off her plane's ladder.

Her Majesty Queen Juliana of the Netherlands had arrived in Aruba!

Accompanied by His Royal Highness Prince Bernhard and Aruba-greeters Lt. Gov. L. C. Kwartzs and Major G. J. B. Veenhuys - the reigning monarch walked through files of Aruba Brownies, Girl and Boy Scouts and Explorer Scouts as she began her Aruba visit of Oct. 21, 22 and 23.

It was a whirlwind visit that had the royal motorcade travelling the length and breadth of the island in an attempt to visit as many parts of Aruba as possible. And wherever she went the queen answered the cheers of the throngs with a smile, a hand wave and, when opportunity presented, a pleasant word or two.

The queen had hardly arrived in Aruba when the events planned for her visit rapidly took shape. Everything was in readiness from the complicated system of routing the royal party without possible delay to the installation of the last piece of bunting. It was a tremendous occasion for Employee Medical Center and turned left onto the main refinery road. Near the Cement Plant the cars paused while Mr. Horigan pointed out for the queen the cat cracker.

Past the General Office Building the cavalcade split. The queen and most of the other visitors went to Lago Hospital. The prince went to the Aruba Yacht Club.

At the hospital Queen Juliana was welcomed by Medical Director Dr. R. C. Carrell and Assistant Director J. E. M. van Ogtrop. The company's off-duty doctors, waiting in the lobby, also greeted the queen and then she started a tour of the building.

Though she was scheduled to visit only three rooms, the queen showed so much interest in the hospital that her tour included the entire ground floor. She entered a number of rooms and spoke to the children and adults who were patients. After greeting the nurses and aides who were lined up in a corridor, the queen left for the Esso Club.

In the meantime the prince had arrived at the yacht club where his appearance was the signal for the start of a sailfish race and water-skiing exhibition. He was welcomed by N. J. Driebeek, commodore of the yacht club, Harold Oduber, vice-president of the Aruba Boating Club and B. Teagle, Lago's public relations manager.

The prince presented engraved cups to Michael Hagendoorn, winner of the race, Theo Blok, second and Bernard Yurash, third, then left for the Esso Club to rejoin Queen Juliana.

Members of Lago's management and their wives were hosts at the tea during which the specially-bound copies of the book about Queen Juliana's eldest daughter, Princess Beatrix, was presented by Mrs. Horigan.

The queen, pleased and surprised by the gift, remarked on the handsome binding which was done in The Netherlands.

Following the tea, the queen, escorted by Mr. Horigan, drove to the Youth Canteen where she was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Maria van Ogtrop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. van Ogtrop. The canteen, established for Lago Colony teen-agers, was the inspiration for the national gift to the queen.

the populace of Aruba. It marked the first time a reigning monarch had graced the island. Not since March, 1944 had Juliana been in Aruba and then as a princess visiting the islands of the Caribbean.

Her first public appearance took place the night of her arrival at Wilhelmina Stadium. There she viewed displays of group gymnastics put on by untrained youngsters representing schools and organizations. The queen also saw groups parade before her of the various athletic and social clubs. Attracting a great deal of interest were the Surinam ladies in their loose fitting "kotomissies," a dress much like a "Mother Hubbard" outfit completely hiding the contours of the body.

Oct. 22 began with an early 8 a.m. appearance at the Government Building. From the balcony she viewed the cheering throngs and listened to the songs of hundreds of school children. Her next stop - and perhaps most memorable of the entire Aruba visit - was Wilhelmina Park where she unveiled the statue of her mother. Following an introduction by Lt. Gov. Kwartz in which he referred to the monument as an emblem of Aruba's love for the monarch that ruled from 1898 to 1948, Queen Juliana pulled the cloak from the statue. The Netherlands' reigning monarch stood for seconds on end looking at the white statue against the blue Caribbean sky of her mother and ruling predecessor. She was a picture of adoration as the band played "Wilhelmus" and the Netherlands standard was raised.

Her next stop was the Aruba Technical School where, after receiving a gift from ATS Student Peter Zambrano, she spoke to the students of the school and students of MULO schools. San Pedro Hospital followed and here she showed the sympathy and understanding she is known for.

OSCA Tops Field In Aruba Sports Car Test

AN OSCA (at left), driven by M. Marcotuli of Venezuela, turned out to be the top machine in the sports car races held Oct. 23 at Princess Beatrix Airfield. The OSCA captured the 1500 c.c. race and the handicap event. A Mercedes 300 SL, driven by E. Chimeri - also of Venezuela - won the 1500 - 3000 c.c. class, ran second in the handicap.

E OSCA a gana e careda di 1500 c.c. y esun di handicap. Un Mercedes 300 SL, corrió pa E. Chimeri - tambe di Venezuela - a gana den e clase di 1500 - 3000 c.c. y a sali segunda den handicap.

Venezuela Car Takes Handicap

Close to 4000 persons ringed Princess Beatrix Airfield the afternoon of Oct. 23 to see an innovation in Aruba's sporting scene - sport car races. For three hours they watched cars from Aruba, Curacao and Venezuela speed around the airfield's runways and taxi strips and saw an OSCA from Venezuela emerge the top car.

Driven by M. Marcotuli, the low-slung, gray and red speeder took the 1500 c.c. event and then ran off with the handicap race. The OSCA covered the 44 kilometers in the first race in 28:35 minutes for an average speed of 92.1 kilometers per hour.

In capturing the 22 kilometer handicap race, Mr. Marcotuli covered the course in 14:24.4 minutes. His average speed was 99.22 kilometers per hour.

To take the handicap race, Mr. Marcotuli had to beat a Mercedes 300 SL which, driven by E. Chimeri - also of Venezuela - won the 1500-3000 c.c. race. The powerful cream and red Mercedes ran the 44 kilometers in 24:24.5 minutes at an average speed of 108.2 kilometers per hour.

Because of their smaller engine capacity, the first six cars that finished in the 1500 c.c. race were given an advantage over the four cars that finished the 1500 - 3000 c.c. event. The advantage ranged from a few seconds to one-lap.

The OSCA had completed one lap when the starter's green flag sent the Mercedes whining in pursuit. The 10-car field was strung around the course, giving the high-performance OSCA and Mercedes ample racing room for their duel.

Easily out-stripping the other cars in its class, the Italian-made OSCA slowly improved its lead on the German Mercedes. With a one-lap advantage at the start, the OSCA was 1 1/4 laps ahead at the end of two laps, 1 1/2 laps ahead at the end of five laps, 1 1/2 laps ahead at the end of seven laps and was closing on the bigger German car at the end of the 10-lap race.

In the 1500 c.c. event, the OSCA fought off constant challenges by an MG driven by W. R. Constable of Lago's Marine Department who finished second and D. Brailey, International Business Machine representative assigned to Lago who finished third in his Jowett Jupiter.

Second behind Mr. Chimeri in the 1500 - 3000 c.c. race was Dr. P. Groenhart of Aruba in an Austin Healy. Third was I. R. Jas of Curacao in an Austin Healy "Le Mans."

Also on the afternoon's program were "drag races" in which stock cars competed over a straight, 1.2 kilometer course against time. Winners in the six engine-displacement classes were:

1200 c.c. - A. T. Willis of Lago in

You Should Know

Chewing gum is an American custom, but the sapodilla tree which furnishes the basis for gum is not grown in the United States. It is a tropical tree.

The wood of the sapodilla tree is unusual for it is so hard that it will not float. A splinter of the wood could be driven into a pine plank. It bears a fruit used only by the natives. The gum factories in our country are a long way from these trees. Many obstacles must be overcome before the chewing gum stage is reached.

The workers who tap the scattered trees, by a method similar to the way rubber or maple trees are tapped, must spend considerable time going from tree to tree collecting the milky latex because there are few cultivated groves. Labor for this tapping and collecting is scarce, due to jungle conditions as well as the danger from reptiles and insects.

The tapping is done by a workman called the chiclero. Braced only by a rope far up in the tree, he is exposed to considerable danger. Accidents are frequent and often there is no medical aid available. Superstition following an accident to a chiclero is liable to keep other workers out of a region of sapodilla trees for a long time.

Mixed with impurities, the small amounts of latex are put in iron kettles to boil over an open fire. A stick is dipped in the boiling mass from time to time and as it is withdrawn the latex on the end of it hardens. It is dipped again and again until a sizeable ball is made which is then stacked for transporting to the docks.

The transportation is as primitive as the preparation of the latex itself. It is often brought from the interior by mule back as well as canoe on the first leg of the long journey to the manufacturer of chewing gum.

Before it becomes chewing gum, the latex is subjected to intricate machinery which processes and refines it. Flavoring of peppermint, spearmint, cloves and other condiments, as well as coloring, are added. Each stick is sugar coated and individually wrapped before being packaged. The handling in the factory is as modern as it is crude in the jungle.

Next time you chew a stick of gum, remember the long pull it has already had!

Short Story

Baby Ghost's Frightening Halloween

All year long Mama Ghost tutored Baby Ghost in the art of haunting. They lived in that group of old trees down in the hollow where no one ever goes - that is, no one but all the other ghosts.

"Say boo!" ordered Mama.

"Boo!" repeated Baby.

"That's fine," she said fondly.

"Now try a long low whoooo."

"Wheeee," said Baby Ghost.

"Not wheee - whooo," she corrected.

Baby Ghost practiced until he got the sound just right.

"Now before you go out to haunt on Halloween Eve, you must know what to do. Get behind the curtains and stir them. That always worries people. You can bring some chains along and rattle them too."

Baby Ghost listened attentively to his mother's instructions. She had many good ideas and hints, and Baby remembered them all. He was a good pupil, and he could hardly wait until he was out on his own.

At long last, Halloween Eve came around. It was a wonderful night, brisk and cold, with a big orange moon to light up the ground and make things look a bit eerie. Baby Ghost felt a stir of excitement. "May I go now?" he asked his mother.

"Yes, my son. You are on your own now. Do a good job of haunting, and then meet me back here in the hollow. I'm too old and tired to go out, so I'll wait here. It's up to you young ones to take over."

So Baby Ghost sailed off through the trees and out of the hollow. He was enjoying his ghostly trip for the windows were lit up with bright Jack O'Lanterns, and the store windows were decorated with black witches and yellow pumpkins.

He met a few black cats in town, but they were just walking around minding their own business, and hardly paid any attention to him. He jumped out at one and said, "Boo!" The cat just leered at him with one eye, and then turned his back on him. Baby Ghost felt hurt. The cat was supposed to arch his back with fright, nasty old cat.

He floated on until he saw a pumpkin high on a gate post. "Wheeee!" he whistled. The pumpkin didn't even blink. "Excuse me," he corrected, "I mean whooo!" Still the pumpkin just looked at him with that silly grin.

"Silly old pumpkin," he said. He had fully expected the pumpkin to fall off the gate post in terror. "I'm not wasting any more time on pumpkins and cats," he thought. "I'll pick the house I want to haunt."

He picked out his house, and floated up and into an opened window. He waved the curtains back and forth. There were two boys in bed, but they didn't notice the curtains. He heard them talking to each other.

"Wheeeee! I mean whooooo," he whistled.

"Did you hear something, Dick?" asked one of the lads.

"Yes, let's get up and look," answered Dick. "Look, over by the window. What is it?"

"Boo!" cried Baby Ghost, popping over to them.

They didn't even back away. "I think it's a ghost," said the one named Bobby. "It looks like an awful little one."

"What do you know," said Dick. "A real ghost — he's a cute little fellow."

"Isn't he," agreed Bobby. "Hello Ghostie, come on in. Don't be afraid."

Baby Ghost was indignant. In fact he was insulted and he also felt a little foolish, especially when Dick picked him up and cradled him in his arms as if he was a pet puppy.

"There, there," consoled Dick. "Don't tremble so. We won't hurt you."

Baby Ghost finally wriggled out of the boy's arm and floated out the window. He went back to the hollow with his head hanging low.

"Back already?" inquired his mother. "How were things?"

"Terrible!" Baby Ghost was in tears. "No one was afraid. In fact, the smart alec boys just cuddled me."

His mother shook her head. "Things aren't like they used to be. People just don't believe in ghosts any more. And if they do, they just aren't afraid of them. I'd like a real old fashioned Halloween, but I guess they're gone." She sighed.

Baby Ghost looked around. "Why everyone is here. Isn't anyone out haunting?"

His mother looked around hopelessly. "They all say the same thing. Business is terrible. No use going out to scare people that don't get scared. We might as well stay here and not waste our time."

That is why the ghosts stay in the hollow and never venture out, and we have such peaceful Halloween Eves.

Fun Project

From Cans to Canisters - It's Easy!

This cute red canister set with Mexican designs in gay colors was made from vegetable shortening cans. Leave the covers attached at their points of solder and remove any paper labels and bits of glue. Have the cans clean, inside and out, then paint them with a good grade of paint, enamel or lacquer. Let dry and apply your decals as directed. Or you can glue on pretty glossy pictures cut from magazines; then after the paste is dry, put a coat of clear varnish or plastic over them to keep them safe when the canisters are washed.

These sets are good to hold your hobby materials or collections until you get them mounted. They are fine in the kitchen or in your mother's sewing room to hold buttons, thread, tapes, rick-racks, laces, elastic and other materials. Your father might like a set in his workshop. You can make the sets in fours, sixes, or whatever number the person needs to hold certain materials. They are very fine gifts for practically anybody.

As a way to raise money for your club, you can canvass the neighborhood and pick up empty cans, make up the sets, then canvass again and sell them to housewives or hobbyists. They can be decorated to match the color scheme in the owner's kitchen, in which case you would get her order, then make the set to match her kitchen, both in color and in choice of the decal.
